Powerful knowledge

- Not all cabins on the Titanic were the same. People with lots of money travelled first class. This meant their rooms were very posh. Sometimes, meals in the first class restaurants had ten different parts.
- Second class passengers had a library and their own walking areas on the ship called promenades. The cabins were quite nice.
- People who travelled in third class usually didn't have much money. The cabins were near the ship's engines so could be noisy. There were only two baths between 700 people. Third class passengers weren't allowed to go in the first or second class
